Dear Cisco,

On Monday I couldn't wait to go to Outdoor Science School. When we got the reports about the weather, we couldn't go, because the roads were too icy for the busses. We went on Tuesday instead.

I was pretty upset about Monday, but when we got there, I forgot about everything, because I was so excited and the cabin was better looking than my house. It was very big and nice. OMG! The food was the bomb (SO DELICIOUS) it was like heaven. And the view was so beautiful. I wish we would have had some time to make a snowman. I want to live over there so badly. I love that place, it is so awesome. It is so awesome, I spelled it with 2 e's.

We had made a snowman but Angel broke it, we were almost done, too. We had trouble putting the head on it. The ice was very, very, cold, and I wasn't even wearing gloves, so it was even more cold. The night hike was so peaceful and quiet. The solo hike was awesome, and all the girls went by themselves, but the three boys went together. I'm not saying who, but their names rhyme with (ANGEL, CONNOR, the cabin leader) I had fun.

Sincerely,

Danielle Vasquez
